UNHRC: WE PUT THE LIFE IN LIFELESS

By Shreya Jain

Hello and welcome to UNHRC aka the most happening committee. EVER. Like LITERALLY.

On one side we have The Republic of Uganda and Spain. These delegates made the most of the resources they had. The two creative delegates managed to play cross and knots mid-session via chit and even get gagged for doing so. Spain was deeply saddened that their plan had failed, but that did not mean that he would use his precious time listening to the committee proceedings. He opened his laptop and (sneakily) started to play the 'no connection T-rex' game. The IP noticed this too. The poor guy was just having one of those days when the executive board gagged him (again). This time for not wearing a mask. When the delegate realised that there was no way out, he sat in the committee ripping apart his paper cup to shreds.

On the other hand, as the council discussed ways to help out the refugees at the Belarus- European Union border, The People's Republic of China decided to take up this golden opportunity to take a power nap. While, The Republic of Latvia had their placard upside-down, was their president dead or was this a way of symbolising the state of this committee?

The executive board though, they were trying their best to keep their delegates entertained. One of them was sweating through his once light grey, now dark grey shirt, trying to make this a happening committee and failing. The other, he even tried to beat-box to grab the attention of his fellow committee members. Unfortunately for him, no one was interested enough to even look up.

When in the White House Situation Room
You'd think you're supposed to act serious and alert
Except when the EB members are compatible best friends
(also if you're not wearing a comfortable shirt)
With no mics and a projector that barely worked
The committee started off quite nervous
With their voices hardly audible and the opening video with only subtitles crisis over crises over crisis with plans of action having the title as 'title'
the committee gave speeches after speeches
with no time to sit idle
but it was all worth it because towards the end of the day we did get a mic
(with neon lights on it)
And moved on , psyched.

THE HAUNTED JOURNALIST

The true story of a tortured soul

By Anoultara Nayar

I entered hesitantly and immediately; the door shut with a bang that had me quaking in my heels. The air was still and warm, like it was thoroughly underwhelmed by the petrifying storm that hit the city the previous night. I was surrounded by a cluster of people, but they seemed motionless like mannequins.

Abruptly, I heard something- a faint, mere hint of a voice. I knew there is something being said. Something that I must hear, I felt it in my bones.

To all the readers who do not have an appetite for horror, viewer discretion is most certainly not advised, for I do not speak of any ghosts returned for fulfilling their life's aim or spirits gone astray; but only of all the delegates in UNSC committee.

Ukraine's opposition is Russia -a country that is refuting dialogue and wants to claim the territory of Ukraine. And the delegates opposition?

Well, it is a mic. An uncooperating mic that wants to command the attention of the room but just cannot for some odd reason.

The speeches were spoken so softly, seeming to imitate a child who accidentally uttered a curse word and now has to offer any explanation of knowing such words, apart from rightfully blaming their younger sibling.

Lastly, the agony of being a journalist in such a committee is unfathomable because you need to write something and the only option you are left with is to kindly ask for a brief overview of each delegates' speech through chits after deliverance to which you receive a response which closely mirrors the length of the great Mahabharata.

Not only did the delegate of Spain not have any connection with the internet but also with the committee

A TURBAN AND A PANTSUIT

BY MALLIKA GERA

There were matching outfits involved.

Seeing the Director General and the Secretary General so up close and viewing their dynamic and harmonious relationship, not to mention their evident bond, certain speculations have inevitably begun swirling around the two.

According to multiple backstage sources, and well, anyone with properly functioning eyes, it's been reported that the Director General and the Secretary general have been seen together on many occasions.

It's also worth noting that they both showed up in matching outfits. And not just matching outfits in any colour, but one of the most universally synonymous colours , 'pink'. Now sure, pink in general may have just been a fortunate coincidence, but the exact same shade too? Surely some thoughts go into that.

And more are sure to follow, as we see they evidently enjoy each other's company, and in a very "McDonald's" manner, come as a two for one combo.

And while I'm all here for the matching outfits, there's no guarantee as to where this is headed. However, the fact that each rumour is to be taken with a grain of salt still prevails, so until further information is provided by the pair itself, its preferable to keep our expectations at par, and one can only hope for confirmation, or in a more disappointing case, denial, via either person.

CHAOS AT THE CABINET

BY AANYA SHARMA

Once upon a confusing time,
A committee began when the clock struck nine.
The delegates slowly came on stage,
But thoroughly ignored the concept of a freeze date.
The EB let out a long-suffering sigh,
And looked like it wanted nothing more than to already say goodbye.
The lady's remarks were as blunt than a sharpened knife,
But the guy just looked tired of life.
He came alive when the solutions went wrong,
Seeing the inaccuracies in the solutions, he seemed ready to burst into song.
Both when called upon to speak and provide answers fair.
For a lesson in pure confidence and zero logic,
Look at the plan of Action titled 'Pakode Chahiye Humme'.
Renowned for its Vada Pav is Mumbai,
And so this name highly dissatisfies.
The guy in the EB argued so violently with the Defence Minister on Geneva
Guidelines,
That the latter seemed ready to resign!
Once upon a confusing time,
A committee began when the clock struck nine.
The Cabinet argued for six hours straight,
But there is still a question mark on the country's fate,
And after some speeches, on the EB's face.

TREACHERY ENSUES IN THE CABINET: TRUE COLOURS OF DEFENCE MINISTER

BY AANYA SHARMA AND ARSHEYA SHARMA

Today, a suspicious chit was sent to IP that was immediately submitted to the EB. In it, the Defence Minister suggested to Chief of RAW that it would be a good plan to bait Director of Intelligence Bureau to attract the terrorists.

The enigmatic chit was decoded by the EB and then they promptly read it aloud saying that "India wants to know." But the Defence Minister defended his chit by saying it would be a "strategic sacrifice" to kill Director of IB. The Director of IB said in an official statement:

"The international bureau is appalled by the words of the minister of defence. The bureau does not understand how someone who is in a position as prestigious as his can be consumed with mere office politics while the safety of our nation is at harm."
